WHAT IS GEEKCON GREEN?

Geekcon Green is an invitation-only, sustainability & technology event.

The event harnesses creative, multi-disciplinary individuals that rethink and work on sustainability-promoting projects in these domains: shelter, water, food, energy and communication. This year the event includes an advanced food track, led by culinary experts. The 100 participants, representing various disciplines such as: science, technology, art, design, education and agriculture, are expected to combine their talent and resources in order to build projects and develop innovative blueprints for environment friendly living.

GEEKCON IS A NON-FOR-PROFIT EVENT,
CREATED AND PRODUCED BY VOLUNTEERS FROM THE MAKERS COMMUNITY

WHY ARE WE DOING THIS?

- Because we feel there are not enough applications of sustainability and ecological solutions on a daily basis for the layperson.
- Because in our experience, this meeting format encourages activity and collaboration, and leads to creative thinking.
- A combination of people from various fields, far from their comfort zones, leads to innovation.
- Past events that we initiated resulted in dozens of ideas and quite a few start-ups.

Geekcon Green presents a unique opportunity to be exposed to a wealth of talent in the field of sustainability and the environment, as well as being exposed to innovative ideas before they enter into the market.

The vision behind Geekcon Green is the belief that there is an abundance of technologies and solutions on the market that are not achieving sufficient penetration either due to barriers which include commercial, technological, product, regulatory, or others. Our goal is to stir up these issues among a multidisciplinary community, and attempt to solve them.
